

VACANCY

Editor, Bee World

Bee World is an international journal which provides the link between science and beekeeping. Established in 1919, Bee World publishes articles on all aspects of beekeeping and all species of bees worldwide. It is published quarterly by the Taylor & Francis Group on behalf of the International Bee Research Association.

As Editor of Bee World, you will be responsible for soliciting articles from a network of international contacts, as well as overseeing the overall content of the journal. You will submit edited electronic copy to our publishers. You will enjoy keeping up with the latest developments on bees, and liaising with scientists and beekeepers on bee related news and features to create each Issue.

You will have experience in both bee science and practical beekeeping, preferably with a proven track record of writing both scientific papers and popular articles, and experience of editing. Ideally you will be well known to the bee science and beekeeping communities. As IBRA is an international organisation, you can be based anywhere in the world.

Please send CV or enquiries to: applications@ibra.org.uk

Closing date: 31st July 2017.
